Dear Parent or Educator:

Insecurity, anxiety, and poor self-image are the types of problems young adults and children face on an almost daily basis. As parents and educators, watching our children struggle with self-confidence and personal development issues can be difficult. Based on our own experiences, we know that the answers to life's problems aren't always easy.

The problem is that an overwhelming number of distractions bombards kids today - their iPhone, favorite YouTube videos, and latest video games become a priority while their personal development takes a backseat. Insecurity, anxiety, and poor self-image are all important problems children face almost daily. Yet, as parents and educators, we continue to place more and more demands on kids without providing any real "blueprint for success."

Introducing A Brand-New Program Specifically Created for Kids 7-11 Years Old

Self-Help authors such as Brian Tracy, Steven Covey, and Tony Robbins have trained adults for years on the importance of setting goals and instilling personal habits that yield positive results. The problem is these techniques are impractical for kids. It is difficult for kids to sit down and read long self-help books or expect a child to understand what “visualization” or “peak performance” means.

Teaching a child how to set and achieve goals is an invaluable skill they must learn to prepare themselves for school, adulthood, and life in general. Now, for the first time anywhere, enabledkids.com provides the secret techniques to improve any child’s self-esteem and confidence. Best of all, this new audiovisual series is designed exclusively for and by children. These proven techniques will empower and teach kids about taking control of their lives and positioning themselves for success.

Titles in the Enabled Kids Series:

- Sportsmanship and Teamwork - A healthy mind in a healthy body. Everyone is into sports but the art of sportsmanship is being lost in the quest for being number one. Sports is all about teamwork and working together, supporting each other even though one may not be the ultimate hero, to make the team successful. If one loses, then take the loss in stride and analyze later what went wrong so that the next time it can be fixed.
- Goal Setting - What are the techniques for goal setting for kids. Why they should be setting goals and what are the benefits of goal setting. Click Here For a Sample Lesson on Goal Setting.
- Time Management - Being organized for success. Organizing your school day, when you wake up, organizing your room, instilling an organized thought process, planning the day before, keeping track of time during school and afterward. Spending time wisely on good habits like hobbies, away from TV, reading voraciously, controlled video gaming. Not wasting time hanging out at the malls.
- Managing Your Money Wisely - Instilling good saving and spending habits, saving for the future, dividing allowance and extra money into spending, saving and giving charity. Thinking positively about money and abundance, not focusing on lack in this world. Focusing on plentiful, substance for everyone, being smart, investing in bank or stocks, opening bank accounts, talking to elders about money. Looking at the shopping habits of grownups, shopping wisely, not impulsively, comparison shopping, getting the best deal, and checking online.
- Taking Care of Your Body- In these days of obese children and adults, junk food, chemicals, contaminants, hormones, eating disorders, sugar highs, and incorrect messages from media, it is important for a child to maintain some level of control on their body. They should eat healthy as best as they can, do not deprive themselves of a normal life yet maintain a healthy lifestyle, combining physical activity with good eating habits, chewing food well, not eating on the run, choosing food wisely, looking at labels in the supermarket, being conscious that the big businesses are targeting them, use their “smarts” to eat well while creating a good healthy respect for their bodies and themselves.

- Choosing Your Friends Wisely - More than anything else, what impacts the young person's life is the quality of the company they keep. This section provides advice on first being a good person and having good qualities, and then having good friends who have the same qualities. Loving self, having high self-esteem, not being dependent on others for feedback, being reliant on your own skills, making mistakes and recovering quickly, standing up for yourself, handling bullies, opening up, and trusting others and yourself. Handling schoolyard problems.

This audiovisual program is perfect for kids, peer groups, school teachers, parenting website gurus, child psychologists, and family doctors. It makes the perfect gift for any child.

The Enabled Kids Audio-Video series is unlike any other program because it provides kids with powerful, life-changing tips and techniques. Each 10-15-minute lesson empowers and teaches kids about taking control of their lives.

Presented in in the form of a dialog between friends in a playground - every recorded lesson is offered as a conversation between girls and between boys for each gender. Your child listens to a conversation between two good friends and answers a series of short worksheet questions at the end of each exercise. This series of lessons provides children with the winning strategies they need to effectively manage their emotions and take control of their lives.
