“After working 10 years in the food industry, my restaurant slowly got off the ground. Nothing I tried worked. I even had a copywriter friend put together an ad for me, but it did little to bring new customers. After reading this wonderful guide, I finally felt I could compose successful ads. That same night, I began to write a new advertisement. I followed the book's easy step-by-step instructions. It was as easy as 1-2-3. The next morning, I met with a designer, and together, we designed an ad using the tips and tricks of the book. It was fantastic! The ad worked and worked well. Since then, my clientele has increased every week.

I want to thank the author. This guide is a must-read for all business owners. I strongly recommend it to everyone (well, maybe not to the competition)”.

"Don't hesitate. Act NOW!"

A Word from the Author:

In my 19 years as a Chief Creative Director for various advertising agencies, I've created advertisements of all types: newspaper and magazine ads, billboards, radio commercials, TV commercials, brochures, and pamphlets. I've also created advertisements for food and high-tech companies, schools and universities, motor companies and fashion houses, internet service providers and international calling companies, baby toys, furniture, blankets... You name it.

The idea of waking up at the crack of dawn for a day of filming TV commercials in the desert with a group of free-style parachutists, or shooting a scene with 200 extras in a deserted city in a foreign country might appeal to some; however, for me, it is more exciting, challenging and pleasurable to create a written advertisement for sales. There are probably many copywriters or art directors in advertisement agencies that will smirk at these lines, but I am convinced that the ability to influence the reader, using minimal resources in a short period of time, to initiate an immediate reaction is a kind of magic.

In this guide, I want to teach you the secrets of my successful formula.

Put simply, if you sell any type of product or service in the local papers or weekly circulars or if you design or write advertisements for others, then “The Insider’s Guide To Creating Incredible Profit-Generating Ads” is a must-have!

A president of a large company once mentioned that he knew half of the money he spent on advertising went down the drain. “The problem is,” he said, “I don’t know which half.”

This guide will cut through the nonsense and teach you EXACTLY how to interest and attract customers to purchase your products.

I’m confident that you’ll find these rules work for you just as they’ve consistently done for me and for my clients.

Wishing you success and satisfaction from your business,

Y. Koren, Author.
